Notes to self-disclosure for natural persons according to the FATCA-USA-implementation decree:

You are considered as resident in the United States of America for tax purposes, if, for example one of the following situations describes you (does not contain an exhaustive list of signs):

- You hold a US citizenship (also in the case of dual nationality).
- You hold a US immigrant visa ("Green Card").
- You stayed in the US over a time period of at least 31 days in the current year or you plan a stay in the current year there. At the same time the total duration of stay is at least 183 days during the last three years period. Days of stay shall count as full days in the current year (1/1), those from previous year to 1/3 and days of stay to 1/6 in the year before. Information: If you meet the required criteria, you can apply for an exemption in the capacity of "US-person" on US tax form 8840 (<http://www.irs.gov/pub/irs-pdf/f8840.pdf>). Precondition is that you stayed or that you will stay less than 183 days in the USA and you can provide proof of residence outside of the USA to which you have close links.
- You are subject to US tax with all your worldwide income for other reasons. Information: The ownership or renting of real estate in the USA as well as the holding of shares in real estate funds shall be irrelevant. This does not result in you being subject to US tax with all your worldwide income.

Note that the above list is not exhaustive. If you are unsure whether not fulfill one of the situations described above or whether you are subject to US tax with all your worldwide income in the USA for other reasons, please discuss this with your tax accountant.

For natural persons the US-Taxpayer Identification Number (TIN) is identical with the social security number.
